An expres train crossing the bridge at the time stopped in ord-r to let the petter gers witness the unusual spectacle. Round and round whirled uturus spectacie. Krund and round whirled the cake, in dizzr way, and leuder and more prolonged grew the howls of the poor dog. As the influence of the whorlpool rapids began to be fit the cake increased in speed, whiled sudding into the air, broke in two, and the dog disaccers of from viay. No one thought that he could possibly survive the wild rush through the rapids. When, therefore, word was received that the dog was in the whilp of, still living and once more struggling value to swim to and once more struggling valaly to swim to laid it was ric leed with incredulity.
